City Bikeway Program To Hold Public Meeting Series Public Works Department seeks public input on trail design

The City of Houston Bikeway Program will conduct a series of public meetings to gather citizen comments on fourteen new Houston Bikeway Program trail projects. These projects will create linear parks that include 10-foot wide, multi-use trails along bayous and abandoned railroads in addition to connectors that enhance the connectivity of the citywide bikeway network.

“These meetings offer an opportunity for interested parties to come and review the project concepts with the design team,” said Lilibeth André, Bicycle Pedestrian Coordinator for the City of Houston. “The design teams have surveyed the area for each of these projects and are aware of preliminary environmental, right-of-way, hydrological and other conditions that will allow them to respond to citizen comments. This is a great opportunity for citizens to participate in the development of the design of new bikeways in their neighborhoods.”

Public comments and final studies will help influence the final design for the 80 new miles of bikeways represented by the fourteen projects. Final designs are scheduled for completion by December of this year. The completed designs will be delivered to the Texas Department of Transportation for their review and afterwards the projects will be bid out for construction. The estimated completion date for the construction of these projects is December 2003. They are a part of the 180 new miles of bikeway projects currently underway bringing the total for the entire Houston bikeway network to 380 miles.
